I got home yesterday and I noticed (something / nothing) was wrong. The door was open but I couldn't see (nothing / anything) because it was very dark. I didn't know if I should call (nowhere / somebody) or if I should go inside. I decided to call the police. I tried to find my cell phone but it wasn't (anything / anywhere) in my bag, then I remembered it was in the car. When I opened the car's door, (somebody / somewhere) turned a light on in the living room. When I got my cell phone to call the police, it rang. I answered and it was my husband. I said: "I think (nobody / somebody) is robbing our home!". And he told me: "That's impossible. There isn't (anybody / anywhere) robbing our home!" and I ask: "How do you know that?" He answered: "Because I'm here in the living room calling you. There is (anything / nothing) wrong here. By the way, why are you so late?" Well, I didn't answer that question but he had to explain why he had left the door open.
