READING

Nowadays everyone uses the Internet, but it wasn't used by the general public until the 1900s. One of the first things that you needed to learn was how to send e-mails and check your e-mail. Then, many companies started selling their products on the Internet, and people started to shop online. One important development was the creation of search engines in 1993. It became common for people to use a search engine to surf the Internet and find information. Today, it is possible to play online games, download music or movie files. Currently, two very popular internet activities are to write a blog and use social media. Lots of people do some of these activities to let other people know what happens in their lives.
