A DIFFERENT KIND OF LANGUAGE

When Kristin was just 18 months old, her parents found out she was partially deaf in both ears, she couldn't hear well. Kristin is 27 years old now. She graduated from university and she works as a veterinary. Along the way, she overcame many obstacles and has some advice for kids who are hearing impaired — and for other kids who want to know what it's like to have trouble hearing.

When she was 2 years old, she went to kindergarten. It was her first time she realized my hearing problems made me different. Her teacher was nice, but she was the only student wearing hearing aids. At first, she just cried when the other kids asked her about her hearing problem. Her mom told her that I shouldn't feel ashamed or embarrassed. She said the kids didn't understand about my hearing problem so were only curious.

Later, she learned to communicate very well. One of my high school teachers didn't realize she had hearing problems until the last day of class! she uses only one hearing aid now and she knows how to read lips. She also learnt sign language to communicate with some of my friends. Some deaf people don't wear hearing aids and they prefer to use signs. Some people think that we have a more limited life but she usually goes to the cinema (with subtitles) or go dancing.
