Three Mexican fishermen were very lucky to survive a fishing trip that went terribly wrong. The men were found west of Australia in the Pacific Ocean in a small fishing boat. They had left Mexico over nine months earlier. Unbelievably, the three men survived with no food or water on the boat.

Salvador Ordonez, Jesus Vidana and Lucio Rendon had left their home in a 25 foot / eight meter boat with two engines to catch sharks. “We were going along in good weather when suddenly, the first engine stopped. We tried to fix it but we couldn’t, so we used the other one,” Jesus Vidana reported. That was when the trouble really started.

“After a few hours the second engine broke down and then we were worried. We didn’t have a radio or any food or water because it was only a short trip. The sea was carrying us further and further away from the land. Luckily, it rained every day so we caught the rainwater to drink in our caps. We ate seabirds and fish ... we caught anything that came near the boat and ate it uncooked, of course.” According to Lucio Rendon, the boat nearly sank on two occasions. “The water came over the top of the boat and we thought we were going to die. We asked God to help us.” Lucio says several months passed without them seeing any other ships. “Then suddenly we saw Chinese and Japanese ships passing by because we had reached the other side of the Pacific.”
