Adolph and Rudolph Dassler were the sons of a shoemaker. They loved sports, but they always complained that they could never find comfortable shoes to play with them. Rudolph always said “You can’t play sports wearing shoes that you’d walk around town with”. So they started making their own shoes. In 1920, Adolph made the first pair of athletic shoes with spikes, produced on the Dasslers’ kitchen table. But, in 1948, the brothers argued. As a result, Adolph left the company. He used the first three letters of his nickname ‘Adi’ and the first three letters of the family name ‘Das’ to found his own Company ‘Adidas’. Rudolph relocated his company and called it ‘Puma’ after the wild cat.

Since then both companies have been in competition. And they never spoke each other again. Both companies were the major leaders of the market for many years, though Adidas has always been more successful than Puma.

Finally, in the 1970s, new American companies like Nike and Reebok arrived to rival them.

TRUE OR FALSE?

- Adolph and Rudolph made the first pair of athletic shoes.
- The Dassler Company has been the biggest company ever.
- Adidas has made shoes since 1948.
