The Shrinking Family

PRACTICE #9

Did you know that

It took only 12 years- from 1987 to 1999- for the population of the world to increase by one billion people. The world's population now stands at over six billion people.

There were 111 cities with more than one million people in 1960. By 1995 there were 280.

Every 20 minutes, 3500 new lives are added to the world's population.

In many countries, the population continues to grow and create a lot of new problems. Interestingly, however, family size is not increasing everywhere in the world. In some places, women are having fewer babies.

Experts believe that the education of women is important for successful population control. When women and Young girls are educated, they participate more in family decisions: They become equal partners in the decision-making process.

In both Mexico and Italy, family planning programs and new job opportunities for women have changed everything.

Elisa Sanchez is a mother in Monterrey, Mexico. She and her husband are both high school teachers in their thirties. They have two kids. They don't plan to have any more. "I was one of six children," says Elisa. My husband comes from a family of seven. People used to have more children in the sixties and seventies. Now it's different."

Elisa's husband thinks the lower birth rate is a positive change. "With a smaller population, there will be less competition. That means there will be more job opportunities for young people."

Gina Moretti Works hard as a TV announcer in Milan, Italy. “My mother thinks I work too hard. Every time I visit her she asks me the same question: When are you getting married?”

Gina is 32 and her mother is worried about Gina’s ability to get married and raise a family in the future. The Italian government is worried, too. In 1958, one million babies were born in Italy. In 1998, it was half that number. The average mother in Italy has her First child at the age of 30. After 30, experts note, there isn’t a lot of time for women to have many children. The population is aging rapidly. Some wonder: Has population control in Italy been too successful?

Are the statements TRUE or FALSE.

1. The population of the world is increasing.
2. Family size is increasing everywhere in the world.
3. Family planning is having an impact in Italy.
4. In the past, large families were common in Mexico.
5. The birthrate in Italy is increasing.
6. Most Italian mothers have their first baby in their twenties.
